NINE RAHS FOR "COOK."

Fraternity Men Honor the Chef at Their Chapter House.

The members of a fraternity not far from the University of Missouri campus were elated last night over an exceptionally good dinner that had been served at the chapter house. As the result of an unanimous vote taken at the table they went to the front porch after the meal and gave nine rahs for "cook."

Tigers' Attention!

Thanksgiving is not far off. We want to see that Kansas aggregation sent home crushed with defeat. We offer our wife toward that goal. Ten gallons of our best ice cream shall refresh your bodies and cool your temper. Get busy.

"TICKET TO -----," THEY SAY

He Sees Crippled, Rough,
Smooth, Firm, and Trembling Hands.

"Ticket to ----" and a hand shoved under the low window with the necessary money for a ticket is all that the ticket agent hears or sees as he supplies the wants of his customers. C. H. Shafter, ticket agent at the Wabash station at Columbia for the last four years, was giving his experience in selling tickets for that railroad.

"A hand is generally all that I see of a person who purchases a ticket and I can often judge a man's occupation from the appearance of the hand," he said. "When a large, rough hand is thrust through the window it instantly strikes me that the man is a farmer."

"The traveling man as a rule wears a diamond and his hands are smooth, white and firm."

"The hands of a woman are soft and white and trembling as they deposit the money on the counter."

"A drunken man usually shuffles up to the window, shoves the money out with some force, and drops it carelessly."

"Sometimes I see pointed fingers, more like those on the hands of a monkey, and when the features are observed they also resemble those of a monkey."

"Once a man confidently laid a Mexican dollar down for a ticket. I did not observe it until I picked it up, when I at once detected the difference."

"Hands of all descriptions appear in the window—crooked, crippled, and with fingers missing. But the most unusual thing is to see a concerned man. The dexterity with which they smooth out a bank bill on the stub of their arm is remarkable."

"Steel hooks which are used in the place of hands are very scarce and I have seen only one in the time that I have been selling tickets."

HEARD MISSOURIAN'S REPORTS

Game in Detail Followed by About 500 Route's Downtown.

About 500 loyal Tiger supporters gathered in front of Missourian Hall yesterday afternoon to hear the detailed reports of the Missouri-Iowa game furnished by the University Missourian. The reports were announced by C. A. Rockwood through a megaphone. The first bulletins were received about 3 o'clock when the line-up of the teams was sent. The line-up of the Tigers caused much surprise to the crowd that gathered early in front of the building.

The individual plays were announced as fast as they could be flashed over the wire from Iowa City. The cheering of the crowd brought people from every direction to hear the news. In the crowd, too, were several university women, faculty members and many citizens of Columbia—all eager for every detail. The telegraph service was much better than at the Ames game and the individual plays were read to the crowd here within a few minutes after they happened.

As good plays were reported the cheering began. Although there was not much organized yelling, the sentiment of the crowd was constantly manifested. An extra edition of the University Missourian with a story of the game was being sold on the streets a few minutes before 6 o'clock.
